"Natural Gas."

Of the comedy, "Natural Gas," which will be presented at Evans opera house next Wednesday evening, the New York Tribune says:

"Eugene Tompkins' management of the Fifth Avenue theater was successfully begun by the first production in the city of Grattan Donnelly's musical farce, 'Natural Gas.' The object of 'Natural Gas' is to amuse. The author, managers and a great mass of theater-goers are satisfied. 'Natural Gas' is the best of its class, for while it has no more merit in dialogue than some of its predecessore. It has a constant flow of spirited and laugh-provoking action. A company of cutremely clever people are engaged in the performance. Henry V. Donnelly is an excellent comedian and mimic, while Eddie Girard is a remarkable comedian-acrobat, dancer and imitator of monkey antics. The piece was warmly received by an audience which tested the capacity of the house and will doubtless be received for weeks to come." it has a constant flow of spirited and

FIVE CENTS OR A BIT

The Great Controversy That Is Agitating the Saloon Men.

COMMENTS ON THE BOYCOTT

Mr. Petritz Defines His Position in the Lager Beer Discus-sion-He is Willing to Fight It Out.

The movement against J. V. Petritz for selling Milwaukee beer to the 5-cent sa-loons was the subject of much conversation on the streets yesterday. The ques-tion was warmly discussed in various places. Among the up-town saloon men the impression prevailed that the idea was a just one and that the only way out of the difficulty was for Mr. Petritz to refuse to sell imported beer to the 5-cent places. One impression was that it was wrong to sell the Pabst beer to a bit saoon and at the same time to sell the same beer to that saloon man's nearest neighbor who only charges five cents per glass. A. C. MacCallum of MacCallum & Cloutier, in a few rem arks to the reporter said: "I don't fully understand the prop-

A. C. MacCallum of MacCallum & Cloutier, in a few rem arks to the reporter said: "I don't fully understand the proposition as it now stands. It would appear that the action of the saloon keepers on Thursday evening was somewhat hasty. I think if Mr. Petritz and the proprietors of the 5-cent saloons had been consulted and met half way that the difficulty could easily have been bridged over. Mr. Petritz, however, should look after his own interests as his judgment directs him. It has only been recently that Milwaukee beer has been sold for five centsa glass. If the proprietors of these places desire to retail this beer for five cents a glass, of course that is their own business. However, I think it is not a very good thing for the town to advocate the five-cent price for beer. In my judgment Mr. Petritz could have got around the question if he had been properly approached. I think it would be a very good plan to refuse to sell imported beer to the five-cent saloons, but of course Mr. Petritz knows his own business."

Mr. Petritz was then seen and said: "I think the action of the saloon-keepers against me is the most absurd thing I ever heard of. Many promiuent citizens, friends of mine, who are not in the saloon business, coincide with me and are laughing at the bare idea of a boycott under the circumstances. I readily admit that it will hurt me at present, and possibly for some time in the future. There are but two places at present that sell my Pabst beer for 5 cents a glass. They are the Mountain View saloon and John Barkovich's place on Chestnut street. John Barkovich commenced selling the beer at this price about one week ago and the Mountain View only two days ago. There are at present eight 5-cent beer saloons in the city. At six of these places they handle only the Anaconda and the Centennial and Silver Bow beer of Butte. John Barkovich and Mountain View saloon are old customers of mine, if they see fit to retail their goods at a cheaper price than formerly I don't consider that as being any of my busine In the other 5-cent saloons I have never had any trade nor have I solicited any. I make nothing on beer here, as it costs me $11 per barrei to lay it down here and I get $13 for it and pay the expenses of its delivery. Why don't the saloonkeepers make some kick against the Butte and Anaconda whole-salers of beer? They probably sell a great deal more than I do, as their beer is handled in six or eight five-cent saloons. People who want five-cent beer go and buy it and walk out regardless of what kind it is. Besides if I refuse to sell the beer to these people they can ship it in here from Butte at almost the same figure. Twenty-five cents difference on a keg makes but little difference to the purchaser. There are 100 ten-cunce glasses of beer in a keg which brings in $8 at five cents a glass. This gives a net profit of more than 100 per cent., as the beer costs but $3 per keg. In Milwaukee beer there is more head than in the local, and the liquor is lively until the last drop is used in the keg. In drawing the beer a large foam is caused, consequently many more glasses are sold than can be sold out of a keg of the Butte or Anaconda beer. Every glasses are sold than can be sold out of a keg of the Butte or Anaconda beer. Every saloon has its own class of customers and I propose to treat all alike and bar none. If they wish to buy beer of me, I have it for sale and all comers can get it; and those who don't want it, can get it where they may wish. While acknowledging that if boycotted in my entire business I will be greatly injured, I do not think the movement is a just one and I cannot comply with the demand."

John Barkovich when seen said: "I demand."

John Barkovich when seen said: "I propose tocontinue the sale of Milwaukee beer at five cents a glass. I commenced it about eight days ago and think I have since had a better business than before. In regard to this action of the saloon men I don't care anything about it. If Mr. Petritz refuses to sell me beer I will take such steps as will enable me to get it elsewhere. There are a number of us here who have considered the matter and think we can get our own beer without much who have considered the matter and think we can get our own beer without much trouble. If necessary we can ship it in here from Milwaukee by the carload. Many of the people who are most vigorous in their kicks are now selling beer in haif gallon tin mugs for 25 cents, which is less than 5 cents per glass. I used to do this, and was compelled to get the worst of it, as nearly all of the sales was placed on my books since I began to sell the Pabst beer for five cents a glass. I trust nobody, and nothing but cash goes. I am at present doing a good business and buying my beer from Mr. Petritz, and I shall continue to do until he quits or leaves town."

sold than can be

John Bertin, proprietor of the Montana Yiew saloon, who commenced selling Pabst beer for five cents only two days ago, was emphatic in stating that he would continue doing so, the saloon men to the contrary notwithstanding. If he could not buy of Petritz he would get his beer from some other sources. from some other sources.

Several of the saloon men who were present at the meeting on Thursday night were visited and nearly all said they were going to stand by their resolutions. John Toocy, of Toocy & Hunt, and Barney McGinley were not present at the meeting on Thursday night and yesterday stated that they were willing to stand by the action of the meeting. They were in favor of keeping up the price of beer, especially imported beer, and to uphold the principles of the other saloon men. Mr. Petritz sold but little or no beer yesterday morning on his usual rounds, and many refused to buy other goods from him. Several of the saloon men who were other goods from him.

leasant and Profitable Exercises at the

The exercises at the Central school yes-Washington's birthday were very interesting. The rooms were tastefully decorated with evergreen and the national colors were prettily arranged about the walls of the various rooms. The artistic decorations of Miss Green's room was especially noteworthy. One of the most interesting and entertaining features of the programme was the scene from the second Continental congress as pictured by the pupils of the high school. The boys representing the various members of that congress proceeded to discuss the Declaration of Independence, each making a separate argument and finally all affixing their signatures to the document. Eddie Heagy, as chairman, represented John Hancock. Samuel Adams of Massachuseets was represented by Benjamin Baker; Mr. Dickenson of New York by Clarence Davidson; Mr. Poca of Maryland by John Harrington; Mr. Stockton of New York by James Toughill; Mr. Thompson, clerk of the house, by David Evans. Mr. Whipple of New Hampshire, and John Adams, who were to have been represented by Samuel Rosenfield and Fred Barker, were not present owing to an attack of the grip.

The boys rendered their several parts in an excellent manner, greatly pleasing the visitors. The programme, which was published in yesterday morning's STANDARD, was carried out in detail, showing careful study and patient labors of the teachers. The visitors quite filled the various rooms, being the largest number ever before in the school.

In the other grades and schools short oral exercises appropriate to the occasion were held in the afternoon. The efforts of the children were keenly appreciated by the many visitors. colors were prettily arranged about the walls of the various rooms. The artistic

HIS LAST WORK.

The Artistic Ending of a Well-Known

One seldom hears of a more artistic ending of an artistic life, says the New York Tribune, than was made by Charles Keene. He had a petdog. Feebleness of age told upon the animal, and at last it was only a deed of mercy to administer prussic acid to it. Keene himself was then lying upon what he knew must be his deathbed. But he raised himself with his deathbed. But he raised himself with a desperate effort, drew his sketch book and crayons from the shelf and bade his attendants bring in the body of the dog. They did so, and the dying mang ased with tears at the form of his lifeless friend. Then, with his own hands, feeble and trembing, he composed it into an easy attitude of sleep, and then sketched it with all his old artistic skill. For a time the strength of health and youth seemed to return to the old man as he, for the last time, wielded the porte crayon so long familiar to his hand. But when the sketch was done his hand fell limp and nerveless, and he "turned his face to the wall." His last sketch was made and the last sands of his life soon trickled through the glass.
